Description:

The project examined different types of offences committed in social media platforms and by use of such networks. It undertakes a comprehensive stakeholder-oriented identification of social media crime and a categorisation of related phenomena. In pursuit of this aim, the project systematically reviews the relevant literature, conducts requirement analyses in order to elaborate inter alia a flexible social media crime-taxonomy, which strongly considers legal aspects and which is intuitively useable especially by the police. Moreover, an interactive case collection guaranteed the dynamic and steady adaptation to future requirements.
